SUMMARY

Life-long learner that is dedicated to the evolving industry of software development. After 6 years studying and practicing education, I have discovered that my greatest learning potential is in software development. There are many parallels between the endless learning curve of a professional musician and a professional developer. Once I realized this, I enrolled in the Grand Circus C# .NET bootcamp where I have developed console applications, web applications, and APIs. This experience provides intense motivation to continue exploring the possibilities of code outside of class time, and I am excited to take that motivation further to pursue this career.
